2:00 - 4:00PM
Merrill Cultural Center

WEDNESDAY
OCTOBER 16

RUHA BENJAMIN

A New Jim Code? Race, Carceral Technoscience, and Liberatory Imagination in Everyday Life

From everyday apps to complex algorithms, technology has the potential to hide, speed, and even deepen discrimination, while appearing neutral and even benevolent when compared to racist practices of a previous era.

Ruha Benjamin is an Associate Professor of African American Studies at Princeton University, where she studies the social dimensions of science, technology, and medicine.

Sponsored By: the UCSC Science & Justice Research Center and Crown College